A new restaurant mix

With the start of fall, new restaurants are opening all over town. Or at least that's what it feels like. Just about every day Dining Dish gets told of yet another restaurant opening—so many will be debuting in the next few months that it's been hard to keep track of what's opening, what's already opened and what's being renovated.

Just this week Dining Dish got word that Kevin Rathbun, along with his partners Kirk Parks and Cliff Bramble finally opened Krog Bar, their long-awaited second venture. Located in the same industrial complex as Rathbun's, the intimate "old-world" setting boasts a stand-up gray marble bar, several communal tables and a patio that seats 25. The menu features Mediterranean-style cold small plates, gelatos and wines from Italy, Spain and France. Sounds like an ideal spot for winding down after a day staring at a computer screen. 112 Krog St., Atlanta, (404) 524-1618, www.krogbar.com.
